CLASS OF 1909

Brooklyn Law School was founded by William Payson Richardson in 1901 at the request of Norman P. Heffley, the founder of the Heffley School of Business. Mr. Richardson, an 1895 graduate of the University of Maryland Law School, became the first Dean of Brooklyn Law School, holding the position with distinction until his death in 1945. Mr. Heffley assumed the position of President of the Board of Trustees.

In 1901, there were 13 students in the first-year class and 5 students in the second-year class. After holding classes in the basement of the Heffley School Building for one year, Brooklyn Law School moved to a brownstone on Montague Street in 1902. The school became affiliated with St. Lawrence University in Canton, New York in 1903 in order to secure degree-conferring authority for its first graduating class. The Brooklyn Eagle Building became the new home for the Law School from 1904 until 1928.

Due to rapid growth, Brooklyn Law School designed a new building located at 375 Pearl Street, taking occupancy in 1928 until 1968. Student enrollment in the 1930s grew to exceed 1,500 students. Due to the Great Depression, the evening program thrived because few students could afford full-time study during the day.

By 1968, the idea for a new building had been conceived and ground was broken at the site of the old Supreme Court Building at 250 Joralemon Street. In 1969, Brooklyn Law School moved into the modern ten-story building which was designed by the architects who conceived Shea Stadium.

Brooklyn Law School continued to prosper, and after 10 years of planning, an addition to the school was occupied in 1994. In April, 1995, the Honorable Guido Calabresi, Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and former Dean of Yale Law School was the featured speaker at the building dedication.

Brooklyn Law School's Deans have been dignitaries of the New York legal community. Dean Richardson was a scholar who authored numerous textbooks including Richardson on Commercial Law, Richardson on Contracts, Selected Cases in Evidence, Guaranty and Suretyship, and Law of Evidence. His most notable work, Richardson on Evidence, was revised by Dean Emeritus Jerome Prince and presently is in its twelfth edition with revisions by Professor Richard Farrell.

Dean Richardson was succeeded in 1945 by Justice William B. Carswell, who was still a sitting judge of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York. Upon the death of Justice Carswell in 1953, Jerome Prince, a member of the faculty since 1934 and an associate dean since 1945, became the third Dean of Brooklyn Law School. Dean Prince had been the most distinguished member of the class of 1933, president of his class, and founder of the Brooklyn Law Review. He is considered to have been the preeminent authority on evidence in the State of New York, and he served on several committees for legal reform in New York. Dean Prince retired in 1971 and he passed away in 1988.

Raymond E. Lisle became the fourth Dean in 1971 after serving as a member of the faculty and in several foreign service positions with the United States Department of State (including Minister at Belgrade, Deputy Assistant Secretary and Director for Relations with Eastern Europe). Brooklyn Law School became a member of the Association of American Law Schools in 1973, in which Dean Lisle became chairman. Dean Lisle also served as vice president of the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc. Achievements during the administration included the conversion of the curriculum from one that was entirely prescribed to one that is broadly elective after the first year, substantial growth of the faculty with broad background and experience, development of joint degree programs, expansion of clinical programs, establishment of a professional career placement office, and the founding of the Brooklyn Journal of International Law. Dean Lisle resigned in 1977, but continued to teach at the school until his death in 1994.

I. Leo Glasser, a Family Court Judge and member of the school's faculty, assumed the position of Dean. He introduced a unique research and writing program before he resigned in 1983 when President Carter appointed him to serve as a judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York.

commenced in 1983. Dean Trager had served as a law clerk to New York Court of Appeals Judge Kenneth B. Keating, as United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, and as a member of the Law School faculty prior to becoming Dean. Under Dean Trager's guidance, Brooklyn Law School experienced tremendous growth in size and stature of its faculty, implemented innovative clinical and skills training programs, acquired several residence halls in Brooklyn Heights, and constructed a major addition to the school's main building. He retired in 1994 when he was appointed by President Clinton to serve as a judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York.

Joan G. Wexler is the seventh and current Dean, and the first woman to head the Law School. Dean Wexler graduated from Cornell University in 1968 with highest honors and distinction, and received a Master of Arts in Teaching degree from Harvard University in 1970. A 1974 graduate of Yale Law School, Dean Wexler was an Articles Editor of the Yale Law Journal and subsequently served as a law clerk to Judge Jack B. Weinstein and as an associate in the law firm of Debevoise & Plimpton. She joined the Brooklyn Law School faculty in 1985 after teaching at New York University School of Law and served as Brooklyn Law School's Associate Dean of Academic Affairs from 1987 to 1994. She has served on numerous committees of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the New York State Bar Association's Committee on Children and the Law, and Vice-Chairperson to the ABA Section of Legal Education. Dean Wexler is a member of many organizations, has twice served as vice president of the New York Women's Bar Association and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Downtown Brooklyn Association.

DEDICATION

James Gordon

Jim Gordon started working at Brooklyn Law School as a reference librarian in 1979 and over the years he became a very important part of our law school's community and history. Jim was a part of the everyday life of the students and he thoroughly enjoyed his position here. It is only appropriate that he should be honored for his long years of dedication, commitment and devotion.

Jim came to us after retiring from his first career as a practicing attorney. He excelled in private practice and attacked his work at our school with the same enthusiasm and fervor. Jim kept up with all of the new advancements in technology and with undying patience taught our students how to use these vital legal skills.

When asking people to describe Jim there were endless compliments made about him. He was a "sweet, committed and dedicated man," that was "well-loved, unassuming and soft-spoken." Jim went the extra distance for everyone that he encountered and he will be deeply missed.

Whoever fills his position will never replace him.

Dean's Address

June, 1996

Dear Class of 1996:

I want to congratulate you on your graduation from Brooklyn Law School and commend you for the considerable time and effort you have devoted to earning your J.D. degrees. I know the demands of law school have been great; but now is the time to take pride in your achievement.

When you began law school our new addition was not yet completed. Now you have enjoyed its benefits and its beauty. I hope you will regard the school's physical evolution as a metaphor for the intellectual growth that you have experienced here.

This is a challenging and exciting time for lawyers. The range of functions performed by lawyers has never been greater, and your potential influence on private lives and public affairs will be enormous. You will, I am certain, be able to meet the challenges and build rewarding careers because of the training you began here.

My sincerest wish is that when you reflect on the legal education that you received here at Brooklyn Law School, you will find that the school did its best to instill in you a love of the law and a commitment to what is best in the profession.

The faculty and I look forward to your continued involvement as alumni with the school. There will be many opportunities — Dean's Day, class reunions, school symposia, and alumni gatherings. Please join us at these events and be a member of a great family and a great tradition.

Best wishes,

The Brooklyn Asian American Law Student Association's goals are to lend support for all students — both academic and social — to ease the transition into law school, and to provide a forum to address issues that impact the Asian-American community. Among the most notable events this past year included hosting the Thomas Tang Moot Court Competition's Eastern Regional; playing a major role in running the 10th Annual National Asian-Pacific Islander Law Students Association conference in New York; organizing voter registration drives, and our seventh annual Alumni Dinner.

The Black Law Students Association serves the needs of the Black law student, the Black attorney and the Black community. We are affiliated with the national body and work in conjunction with local chapters at other law schools. The fall semester began with Welcome Back barbecue for first year and returning students, followed by a Welcome Reception for students of color. We also held a number of panel discussions which dealt with issues of relevance to the Black community and participated in community service projects throughout the tri-state area and Boston. Our annual events included a Kwanzaa Celebration, the Race and the Law Symposium, Black History Month and the Alumni Dinner. In addition to all these activities, our chapter placed first in the Trial Advocacy competition held among BLSA chapters in the metropolitan area.

BROOKLYN JOURNAL of INTERNATIONAL LAW

The Brooklyn Journal of International Law is a scholarly publication devoted to various developments in the expanding field of international law. The Journal just celebrated its twenty-first anniversary in the Spring of 1996, and is one of the leading international law reviews in the United States. The Journal is edited and published by students and, since its founding, has published articles by legal scholars and practitioners covering a wide range of topics in public and private international law. Articles by authorities, in addition to notes and comments by students, inform the legal community of trends and events and analyze their ramifications. Journal membership exposes students to a rigorous survey of international legal topics through international law course requirements and the student writing process. While most students begin their Journal membership with little international experience, they graduate with an informed perspective on international legal topics and practice. The Journal looks forward to continuing its contribution to legal scholarship well into the twenty-first century.

As one of three scholarly honors publications at Brooklyn Law School, the Journal of Law and Policy promotes debate by publishing articles written by professors, students and prominent members of the legal and policy-making communities that treat current legal, political and legislative issues. Completely run by students, the Journal publishes bi-annually, with issues in the fall and spring.

Offers for membership are based on a weighted composite index score, calculated as follows: (1) Legal Writing I and II grades — 30%; (2) grade point average — 40%; (3) quality of graded first draft of Moot Court brief — 20%; and (4) work and writing experience from resume — 10%.

During the 1995-96 school term, the Journal presented a wide variety of issues. In Volume IV, No. 1, the Journal published a comparative analysis of the concept of freedom of contract as treated in the United States and Germany, and also an appellate brief on behalf of an artist who creates exaggerated images of U.S. currency, and who is being prosecuted by federal government for counterfeiting. The Journal also printed a sample of the artist's work in color.

In addition, the Journal published two provocative panel discussions. In the fall edition, the Journal published transcripts and articles from the Edward V. Sparer Public Interest Law Forum entitled, "The Death Penalty in New York: Past, Present . . . Future?" In the spring edition, the Journal published the transcripts from a panel discussion entitled, "The Civil Rights Remedy of the Violence Against Women Act: Legislative History, Policy Implications & Litigation Strategy."

BROOKLYN LAW REVIEW

The Brooklyn Law Review is a journal that presents scholarly works of current interests and quality legal analyses to the legal community. Articles and Comments, remarking on all areas of the law, are of intellectual and practical significance to members of the academic community, the judiciary and practicing attorneys. In addition to providing a forum for novel and polemic ideas, the Review concomitantly offers extensive research and writing experience to law student staff members.

The entire writing and editorial process of the Review is solely the responsibility of student members. One issue in each annual volume pertains to current trends and cases in the Second Circuit. This survey is comprised of general commentaries by prominent members of the legal community on developments in various areas of the law, followed by student-written, in-depth analyses of specific cases recently decided by the Second Circuit.

Membership on the Law Review can add an important dimension to the student's academic experience while at law school. Membership, however, means more than simply an attractive credential to prospective employers.

Membership on the Law Review means the opportunity to contribute to legal scholarship by the potential publication of your article in one of the four issues published annually. The article may concern a critical examination of a new development in the law or a recent court opinion that has a far reaching impact. Whatever the ultimate topic, it is the process of writing your own article and assisting in the production of other articles that comprises the "law review experience." It is a task that requires a significant commitment in terms of time and desire to improve your writing and analytical skills.

The Brooklyn Law Review selects members in four different ways: grades, a best brief competition, a first-year writing competition and on an open note submission basis. First-year students will learn more about the process as the year progresses. Full-time and part-time students in good academic standing are invited to participate in the Review's candidacy program during the summer following the first year. Timely submission of a well-written Case Comment and Superior academic credentials are the major criteria for acceptance to membership on the Review. Once accepted, each staff member is required to submit a cogently written piece, with the assistance of senior staff editors, which may be published during the academic year. If you are interested in learning more about Brooklyn Law Review visit the office in One Boerum Place.

Professor Aaron Twerski at 1996 Passover Lecture.

The Jewish Law Students' Association at Brooklyn Law School ("JLSA") composed of law students who are interested in Judaism and would like to share that interest with the Brooklyn Law School community. We sponsor many functions including: Shabbatons, traditional Friday night dinners at a local orthodox synagogue, lectures on Jewish Holidays by Professor Twerski on the Brooklyn Law School Campus, and social meetings with other Student Association ("SBA") sponsored organizations.

At times, JLSA will petition the administration to avoid scheduling school commitments which conflict with the observance of Jewish holidays. We counsel the SBA to avoid scheduling events on Shabbat (Friday from sunset one hour after sunset on Saturday) and other holidays. Presently, the administration has demonstrated a fair amount of consideration in avoiding conflicts between class, exam and event scheduling and Jewish Holiday observance.

A selection of kosher food is available in the Law School cafeteria. While no foods are yet available, packaged Glatt kosher sandwiches, packaged dishes, Dannon yogurt, fruit, tea, soda and juices are currently available. In addition, Kosher Court, a kosher breakfast-lunch restaurant is nearby and serves pizza, salad, tuna fish sandwiches and a large assortment of kosher lunch foods.

Since 1931, The Justinian has provided a forum for the Brooklyn Law School community. The history of the school as well as many events that transpired outside of the school, both in the realm of law and in the larger society, can be found in the pages of The Justinian. Copies of the paper from the 1930's are replete with summaries of the United States Supreme Court decisions concerning New Deal legislation. A large portion of the paper was dedicated to conveying information concerning World War II and, particularly, providing the status of alumni who were serving in the armed forces in the 1940's. Throughout the ensuing decades, The Justinian has continued the tradition of providing students, faculty, staff and alumni with timely information on topics of law and general interest. The Justinian has also recognized the need for recreation in the legal life. It has published satires, movie and play reviews as well as crossword puzzles in order to meet that need.

The Justinian encourages all alumni to provide us with articles. Submissions that afford current law students the opportunity to learn how to avoid mistakes vicariously are especially appreciated by the student body! So, if you are able to provide a few caveats to those who proceed you or want to submit an article on a law or non-law related issue, please feel free to send it to us at Brooklyn Law School. The Justinian hopes it has served as a source of information and entertainment to you during your years at Brooklyn Law School. Best wishes for a productive, honorable and rewarding career!

Statement of Purpose:

L.A.W.'s purpose is twofold: First, it provides a forum in which women law students can voice their concerns about the quality of their legal education and professional equality. Second, it provides an opportunity to utilize our legal education to explore women's issues and further the goals of women in our community.

MOOT COURT HONOR SOCIETY

The Brooklyn Law School Moot Court Honor Society is one of the most elaborate and successful moot court programs in the country. The Society is dedicated to developing written and oral advocacy skills in preparation for appellate and trial practice. Members of the Society represent Brooklyn Law School at various national competitions sponsored by law schools across the country. Teams of students work together on a written appellate brief and prepare their oral arguments for competition. Brooklyn fields successful teams in a wide variety of areas including International Law, Environmental Law, Family Law, and Labor Law. Our performance over the last three years includes 6 quarter-finalists, 4 semi-finalists, 3 finalists, 3 first place finishes, 3 regional championships, 1 national finalist, 8 best brief awards and 6 best oralist awards. In addition, the Society hosts its own competition, the Dean Jerome Prince Evidence Competition, which has become one of the largest and most respected of the national competitions. The Society also participates in the National Trial Advocacy Competition. Last year, our trial advocacy team won the Northeast Regional Competition and finished third out of 250 schools in the National Competition.

PHI DELTA PHI is the oldest professional fraternity in the Western hemisphere. The group is dedicated to the maintenance and improvement of legal standards and the ethical conduct of law students and lawyers. Five of the nine members of the current U.S. Supreme Court Justices are Phi Delta Phi members. Phi Delta Phi has chartered 179 Students Inns in North, Central and South America, since 1869. The BLS chapter is names Evarts Inn, and was established in 1907.

Evarts Inn sponsors community service, academic and social events, such as this year's used book sale and movie night.

BLSPI was founded in the Fall of 1990 to build awareness of an foster participation in legal fields assisting underrepresented individuals. BLSPI sponsors symposia and organizes public interest activities such as the weekly Brown Bag Luncheon Series at which faculty members and outside practitioners discuss current topics including the Violence Against Women Act, HIV testing of newborns, and public interest job opportunities in the 90's.

BLSPI sponsors summer fellowships which enable students to work at organizations like the ACLU, the Urban Justice Center, and Lawyers for Children.

Funding for fellowships and other activities is raised through events such as our yearly auction, raffle and work-a-day program. The generosity of our supporters has allowed BLSPI to offer six fellowships this year.

To all those who have bread, give

As a young student organization, LEGALS necessarily has an evolving purpose, and the diversity of the activities it sponsors reflects LEGALS' changing view of the needs of its student constituency.

Primarily, LEGALS is a social organization. Mindful that is difficult enough being sexually-diverse generally, and even more so being gay, lesbian or bisexual in the arena of legal profession, LEGALS' primary focus is to provide a setting of comfort for incoming students who need support acclimating to the legal atmosphere.

LEGALS does this by organizing socials and by sponsoring one social gathering each semester at the crucial last-dose-of relaxation moment before finals.

LEGALS has also sponsored, along with other law schools, speakers to address student and public audiences on gay/lesbian related issues. During a past semester, for example, LEGALS sponsored Karen Thompson to speak at the Gay and Lesbian Community Center in Manhattan's West Village.

SIPA — The Student Intellectual Property Organization is open to all students with an interest in patents, trademarks, or copyright. The club was founded at Brooklyn Law School in 1994-95 in response to the increasing role Intellectual Property (IP) played in the legal market. In its first year, SIPA drew the interest of over 30 student members. The objective since has been to increase awareness of IP opportunities and important IP issues. First, a SIPA newsletter will help to foster awareness and appreciation of IP topics. The newsletter will also be a way to showcase BLS talent to local law firms and in-house counsel. In addition, we will be sponsoring seminars and clinics (e.g., patent drafting, trademark splitting, international copyright protection, intellectual property concerns about the internet and CD-ROMs) as well as a city-wide IP recruitment fair. SIPA will work closely with school officials in preparing these events. In addition, SIPA will begin work on the possibility of getting an IP journal started at BLS. SIPA will also push for additional IP class offerings. Intellectual property is one of the fastest growing fields of law today. With students, faculty and the administration working together, we can make BLS a recognized force in the IP arena.

The student government at Brooklyn Law School is known as the Student Bar Association (SBA). Every person enrolled at Brooklyn Law School for a regular course of study leading to a Juris Doctor is a member of the SBA. The primary function of the SBA is to formulate policies which are in the best interest of the student body and to take whatever practical and reasonable steps as are necessary to promote the implementation of such policies by the school's administration. The SBA allocates funds for the student organizations associated with the Law School and is responsible for approving all student nominations to the student-faculty committees as well as approving SBA participation on such committees. In addition, the SBA sponsors lectures by notable figures in the legal profession and political field in conjunction with various student organizations at BLS. The SBA also sponsors parties on and off campus during the academic year for the entire BLS community. These gala engagements include Fallfest and Springfest, two traditionally successful and well-attended events. These events are organized and scheduled by the SBA Social Committee.

Mideast Peace Accord

On September 28, 1993, Israel's Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and the PLO's Yasser Arafat signed an accord at a White House ceremony which would end Israel's military occupation of West Bank and lay the foundation for a Palestinian State.

Yitzhak Rabin Assassinated

On November 4, 1995, a gunman with extremist Jewish organization fired three shots at close range at Prime Minister in Tel Aviv, stunning the nation.

O.J. Simpson

In October 1995, a Los Angeles jury deliberated for four hours before acquitting O.J. Simpson of the June 1994 murder of his former wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman. After his acquittal, Simpson vowed to search for the real killers.

Oklahoma City bombing

On April 19, 1995, a car bomb exploded in Oklahoma City destroying a federal building and killing scores of men, women, and children. Timothy McVeigh, a Gulf War veteran, was arrested shortly thereafter and is awaiting trial in Denver. He has been associated with a government extremist organization.

Snow

New York City broke its previous record for most snow in a single season. Brooklyn Heights received more than its fair share, but fortunately for students the largest storms occurred after final exams.

Newt Gingrich

You either loved him or hated him, but there's no denying that Newt Gingrich, Republican Speaker of the House, and Time magazine's Man of the Year, is someone that could not be ignored.

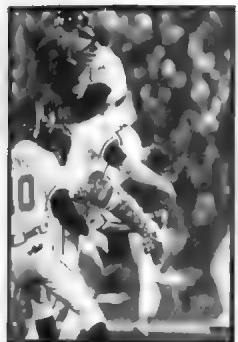

China

Human rights activist Harry Wu, a native of China and a naturalized U.S. citizen, was arrested while trying to enter China, convicted of stealing state secrets, sentenced to 15 years in prison, and released and deported in an apparent attempt to improve relations between China and the United States.

More China

Hillary Clinton traveled to China in September 1995 to speak at the United Nations' Fourth World Conference on Women. Mrs. Clinton surprised her audience and the international community by rebuking Beijing for its treatment of pro-democracy activists. Tensions increased between the United States and China as China conducted military exercises and missile tests near Taiwan, prompting the U.S. to send a carrier task force through the Taiwan Strait. Tensions eased after the first democratic election in Taiwan's history.

In a World Series between two teams with politically incorrect nicknames, the Atlanta Braves, beat the Cleveland Indians in six games. Coincidentally, the Dallas Cowboys won their third Superbowl in four seasons, beating Pittsburgh 27-17.

World Series and Superbowl XXX

Million Man March

On October 16, 1995, hundreds of thousands of African-American Men converged on the nation's capital in response to the call of Louis Farrakhan, the Nation of Islam leader. It was the fourth largest demonstration in Washington's history. He urged the rally to join organizations, gain political control, fight racism, and rid their neighborhoods of crime, drugs and violence.

Pope John Paul II Visits U.S.

Pope John Paul II visited New York and New Jersey in October 1995 and many people joined him to celebrate outdoor mass. The Pope also addressed in the United Nations General Assembly in conjunction with the organization's 50th anniversary.

Bill Clinton

Bill Clinton was preparing to run for re-election, but he and the Congress could not agree on a budget. The U.S. came close to defaulting on its debt obligations several times, only to avert a potential financial disaster through creative financing and several stop-gap spending bills.

Bob Dole

By March of 1996, Bob Dole had wrapped up the Republican nomination in his third attempt to become president. If elected, he would be 73 years old upon entering office.

U.S. Troops arrive in Bosnia

The first American troops arrived on December 24, 1995 as part of a NATO mission to war ravaged Bosnia. While U.S. troops were arriving in Tuzla, French troops were extending their control in Sarajevo. President Clinton promised that the U.S. troops would not be in Bosnia for more than one year.

Portrait of a Star

The Hubble Telescope gave us the first detailed images of a distant star, the red giant Betelgeuse, located 500 light years from Earth. Betelgeuse is the shoulder star in the constellation Orion, the Hunter.
